THE ONLY OTTOMAN IMPERIAL PALACE AND HOTEL ON THE BOSPHORUS

Kempinski
HOTELIERS SINCE 1897

Çırağan Palace
Kempinski
ISTANBUL

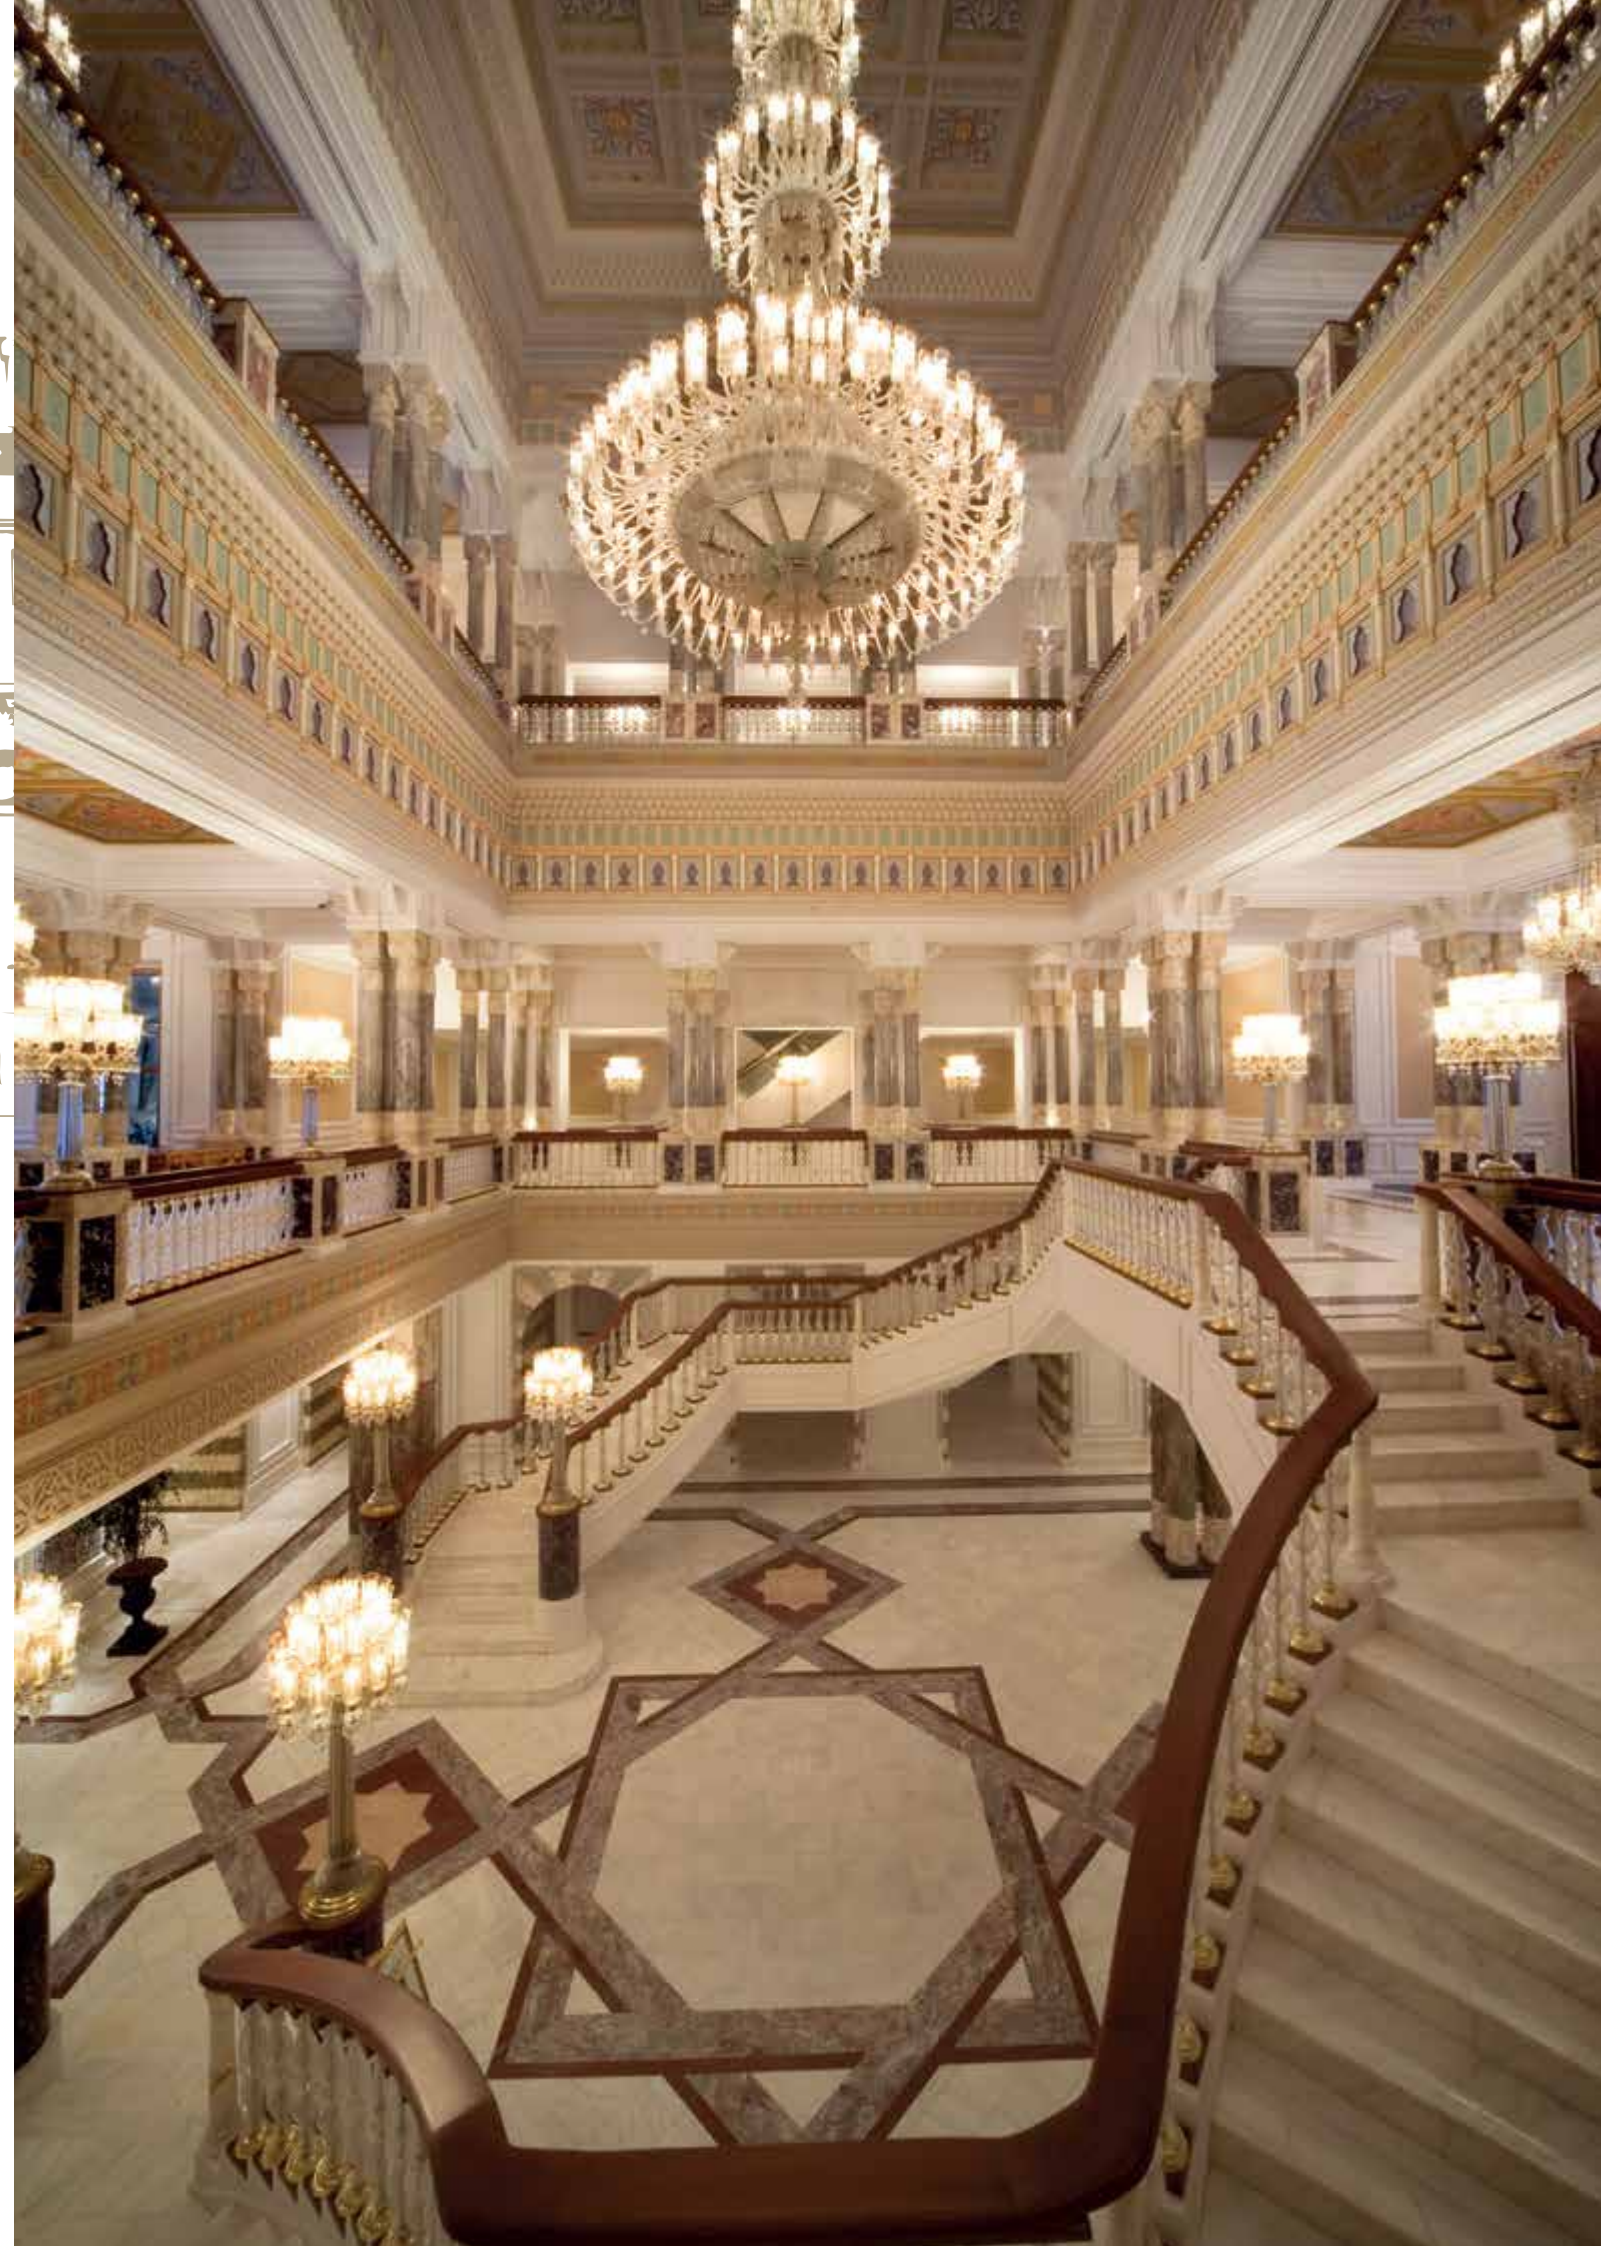

— ROYAL BORN —

Dating back to the 17th century, Çırağan Palace Kempinski Istanbul is the only Ottoman Imperial Palace and Hotel situated on the Bosphorus, one of the world's most important waterways. Facing Asia, with enchanting views to the historical peninsula, it offers the glamour of a genuine Ottoman Palace in a city where East meets West, Europe meets Asia and history meets the contemporary.

Following a full restoration and the addition of a modern hotel building that includes elegant rooms, restaurants and meeting rooms, the hotel and palace opened in 1991 under the leadership of Europe's oldest luxury hotel group, Kempinski Hotels.

The historical landmark also marks the beginning of an exciting new chapter as the legendary hotel has recently redesigned the guestrooms, suites, lobby, and restaurants in the hotel building, offering a world of exquisite redesigns blended with history and grandeur.

The legendary hotel has 317 rooms and suites, including 11 private palace suites in the historical Çırağan Palace. In addition to its magnificent outdoor event spaces that host prestigious local and international events, 20 meeting rooms offer advanced technology and unparalleled comfort to meet the exacting standards of visiting guests.

— A HISTORY — OF TIMELESS ELEGANCE

In the mid-19th century, on grounds that were previously home to royal gardens, a summer villa and a marble palace, Sultan Abdulaziz commissioned the Balyan family – famous architects and veterans of palace design during the Ottoman Empire – to construct the imperial palace. In an ornate style befitting the Sultan, only the finest marbles, porphyries, mother-of-pearl and other valuable materials from around the world were utilised in the construction. Çırağan Palace eventually opened its doors in 1871, ushering in a new era of historical prominence, both as a home to the Sultan and as a host for important government meetings.

In 1910, not long after a historically significant meeting of the Ottoman Parliament, a devastating fire destroyed the interior of Çırağan Palace. Completely dilapidated, with no clear direction on how to best rejuvenate the property, the historical grounds remained uninhabitable and largely abandoned for many decades; albeit, occasionally seeing use for other activities, most notably serving as the home stadium for Beşiktaş football club.

Finally, in 1991, following a complete restoration and the addition of a modern hotel building, Çırağan Palace Kempinski Istanbul was reborn and opened its doors to guests yearning to marvel at its historical splendour.

REMARKABLE FACTS

The word “çırağan” means “full of light” in Persian. The word became synonymous with the palace during the Tulip Period, when torches decorated the gardens at night during “Çırağan Festivals.”

Çırağan Palace’s priceless, ornamented doors were made by Vortik Kemhacıyan, then worth 1,000 gold coins each.

Sultan Abdulhamid II gave one of these doors to his friend, His Imperial and Royal Majesty German Emperor and King of Prussia, Friedrich Wilhelm II, who admired the gift so much that it was put on display in the Berlin Museum.

Rare marble and mother-of-pearl were imported from all over the world for the construction of the palace. Waterfront construction alone cost 400,000 Ottoman liras, and during the construction of Çırağan Palace, which began in 1863 and was completed in 1871, 2.5 million gold coins were spent.

The grounds that surround the hotel is 47,600 sq m (512,362 sq ft), which is the equivalent of approximately eight football stadiums.

Beginning in the early 1930s, in the old palace gardens, Beşiktaş football club built what became known as Beşiktaş Şeref Stadium in honour of the football club founder. Although the Golden Gate extended 7-8 m (23-28 ft), the close proximity to the water made balls kicked into the Bosphorus a common occurrence. Beşiktaş continued to use the stadium for all home matches until 1948.

Çırağan Palace Kempinski Istanbul continues to serve as the inspiration and setting for many books, such as I am Çırağan, Letter from a Stranger and The Imperial Harem of the Sultans, all of which are still on shelves today.

Çırağan Palace Kempinski Istanbul is home to the only registered helipad on the Bosphorus.

The Palace Suite area has an array of unique, historical handmade carpets.

Çırağan Palace Kempinski Istanbul features the biggest Viennese Baroque-style grand chandelier in the world, weighing a massive 2.7 tonnes, bearing 232 lamps. Crafted in aluminium pieces that are cut and polished by hand, the unique style is reminiscent of the grand chandeliers found in the Spanish Riding School in Vienna. Although scaffolding had originally been used to clean the chandelier, a servo has now been added, with routine maintenance and cleaning performed every six months.
