The Hidden Gem of the Mediterranean

Gozo famously provides an oasis of tranquillity, nature and history.
Malta's little sister island is greener, smaller and more rural with life's rhythms dictated by nature.

Steeped in myth and home to the oldest free-standing human structures on Earth, Gozo is also believed by many to be the island of Calypso mentioned in Homer's "Odyssey".

Baroque churches and old stone farmhouses dot the countryside and rugged landscape. With some of the best dive sites in the Mediterranean, Gozo's spectacular coastlines await exploration.

Considered to have one of the most pleasant climates in the world and amongst the top places to retire, Gozo is truly a unique hideaway. The charming village of San Lawrenz is situated on the western side of Gozo close to the splendid Dwejra Bay.

THE HISTORY OF THE ARCHIPELAGO

Citadel

Located in the heart of Gozo, the Old Citadel, which has been inhabited since the Bronze Age, is proof of the rich history present on the island. Most of what is seen today of the Citadel originates from Medieval times, and its fortress was used as a defence mechanism against Ottoman attacks on Gozo. Explore and see the fortified walls of the city, complete with cannons and watchtowers, which will give insight into what the knights had to watch out for during attacks. The fortified city, located at the top of a hill, boasts a rich history and stunning views of the island's capital, which gives one the feeling of travelling back in time.

The Citadel Visitors Centre

The Citadel Visitors' Centre is the perfect way to learn about the history of the island and keep the little ones interested as the self-led tour of the citadel will start off with a short film that explains the history of the island and the citadel, allowing one to better understand the different uses for the different buildings within the fortified city.

REASONS TO VISIT:

- Panoramic views of the city
- Historical architecture and culture
- Local cuisine and lifestyle

Gozo Museum of Archeology

The Gozo Museum of Archaeology illustrates the cultural history of Gozo from prehistoric times to the early modern period. It relies on themes like burial rituals, religion, art, culinary heritage and lifestyle. Following a series of recent upgrading interventions, the museum's permanent display is presently divided into four main sections: Prehistory, the Classical period, and the Medieval and Early Modern periods.

REASONS TO VISIT:

— Boasts unique exhibits from Gozo's prehistoric sites
— The only museum dedicated specifically to the archaeology of Gozo
— One of the few surviving fine townhouses in the Citadel

The Old Prison

The Old Prison lies adjacent to the Courts of Justice to which it was originally connected. Having undergone a number of structural modifications, this prison was in use from the mid-16th century until the beginning of the 20th century. This is the largest known collection of historical graffiti in one single place of the Maltese islands. It includes mainly sea vessels dating back to different periods of time. But there are also palm-prints, crosses, names, dates, games and anthropomorphic figures. Some inmates also appear to have scratched a tally of their length of stay behind bars. This graffiti provides a fascinating insight into the lives of those incarcerated here.

REASONS TO VISIT:

— The oldest surviving prison on Gozo
— Boasts a large amount of unique graffiti
— Provides a glimpse of the conditions in which inmates were kept

Natural Science Museum

The Gozo Nature Museum is situated behind the Courts of Justice within the Citadel in Victoria, and it focuses mainly on the island's natural resources and their use by its inhabitants. The museum is housed within a cluster of three interconnected domestic buildings, dating back to the 1600s. In later years, this building was used as an inn for visitors. During World War II. It served as a shelter for families who sought refuge during aerial bombings.

REASONS TO VISIT:

- Housed in a building which dates back to the 1600s, full of authentic architectural features
- An interesting collection of specimens focusing on local habitats
- One of the museum`s special attractions is an authentic moonstone fragment from the first lunar expedition, Apollo II in 1969

Gran Castello Historic House

The Gran Castello Historic House, also known as the Folklore Museum since 1983, which presents the medieval houses of the islands, is located in Bernardo DeOpuo Street in the Citadel in Victoria, Gozo. There, you will find a wide range of exhibits illustrating the local, rural and traditional aspects of the Gozitan way of life. You will discover the architectural features which reveal some Sicilian and Catalan influences and gain knowledge of a sophisticated Gothic style used in the construction and design.

REASONS TO VISIT:

- One of the finest surviving townhouses in the Citadel
- The only surviving Late Medieval house of its type in Gozo, with Late Gothic influences on the facade
- Provides a wide representation of artefacts related to crafts, pastimes and traditions from Gozo until the relatively recent past

Sanctuary of Ta' Pinu

Known as an architectural masterpiece built in a neo-romantic style, the basilica has welcomed locals and visitors alike since 1932. The sanctuary of Ta' Pinu, built in honour of the Virgin Mary, is located on the island of Gozo, in a valley between the villages of Gharb and Ghammar. The church built in Maltese stone, welcomes all who wish to pray or simply admire the architectural beauty of this sanctuary. This shrine is the most visited place on the island of Gozo. The large number of visitors to this church bears witness to the devotion of the Gozitans to Our Lady of Ta' Pinu.

REASONS TO VISIT:

- It houses mosaic masterpieces inside and outside the shrine
- It boasts scenic landscapes of the island
- It is the most visited place on the island of Gozo
- It is a pilgrimage site

Ggantija Temples

Preceding Stonehenge and the Pyramids, the Ġgantija temples are considered one of the oldest freestanding monuments in the world, making them part of the UNESCO World Heritage list. The site consists of two temples dating back to between 3600 and 3200 B.C. The name Ġgantija derives from the word 'ġgant', the Maltese word for giant as the site was commonly associated with a race of giants. Notwithstanding its age, the monument survives in a considerably good state of preservation. This is evident in the boundary wall which encloses the two temples, and which is built using rough coralline limestone blocks. Just a short walk away, discover one of the few surviving windmills on the Maltese islands, dating back to the period of the Knights', the Ta' Kola Windmill.

REASONS TO VISIT:

- UNESCO World Heritage Site. Some of Malta's best preserved prehistoric temples dating back to 3600/3200 B.C.
- Considered one of the oldest free-standing monuments in the world preceding Stonehenge and the Egyptian pyramids
- They represent a phenomenal cultural, artistic and technological development in a very early period in human life

Ta' Kola Windmill

Ta' Kola Windmill in Xaghra, Gozo is one of the few surviving windmills on the Maltese islands dating back to the period of the Knights'. Its origin goes back to 1725 during the magistracy of Grand Master Manoel de Vilhena (1722-36). The cylindrical shaped tower, includes rooms on two floors and in the middle, a wooden milling mechanism using stones to crush grain into flour. It offers a great insight into the living conditions of that time.

REASONS TO VISIT:

- One of the few surviving windmills on the Maltese Islands
- Provides a glimpse of the local traditional rural life of Gozo in the past centuries
- Houses one of the largest known collections of tools, some of which were manufactured by the last miller who lived inside the mill

Xwejni Salt Pans

Salt has always been considered to be a highly-prized ingredient, as it was used as a form of bartering currency, hence the word “salary” and the expression “worth one’s salt”. Among the many ancient traditions that the Gozitans treasure, salt production knowledge is one of the most cherished, and it has been passed down from generation to generation for the past 350 years. The salt pans stretch about 3km on the coast of the island, and creates scenic views of a rock-cut checkerboard, believed to be one of the oldest operating salt pans in the world.

Blue-water Diving

Gozo, being an island in the middle of the Mediterranean allows for some special treasures to be found in our waters, ranging from a variety of species that live in the sea to ship wrecks and caves that are interesting to explore.

Freediving on Gozo

Gozo is the perfect destination for freedivers of all levels; beginners, as well as highly experienced divers. The lack of tides and strong currents make Gozo a very safe place for freediving and there are multiple exciting dive sites for all styles and levels.

Gozo's underwater world offers reefs and drop-offs deeper than 100m, wrecks and caves, as well as air-filled caverns, tunnels and arches allowing freedivers to have some unique diving experiences. With visibility up to 40-50m and a mild climate all year round, Gozo is a great freediving destination in the summer as well as the winter months. Water temperatures reach up to 28 degrees in the warmest months, stay around 20 degrees till the end of December and rarely drop below 15 degrees even in the coldest months.

There are a number of experienced freediving instructors on the island, speaking different languages and offering courses and certifications of various diving organisations.
